Course Scope

Students will analyze and assess the major social, political, cultural, and intellectual issues that moved Europeans during the early modern period. They will identify and explain major ideas, events, and people of Renaissance and Reformation Europe, and analytically debate and critique the differences in interpretation by historians of the period. Students will engage in in-depth research and reading to write a series of essays that will allow them to argue positions on questions of historical significance in the Renaissance and Reformation period of European history.

Course Objectives (CO)

Upon completion of HIST 535, the student will be able to:

- Analyze the features that distinguish the Renaissance and Reformation periods of European history from other periods. (LO1)
- Evaluate the factors that made Italy a center for Renaissance cultural production. (CO2)
- Identify and describe key characteristics of Renaissance humanism and explain its role as the fundamental outlook of the Renaissance perspective. (LO3)
- Analyze and evaluate traditional and new historiographical interpretations of the Renaissance and Reformation. (LO4)
- Evaluate the personal characteristics of leading Renaissance and Reformation figures and their relationship to the broader historical context that they confronted. (LO5)
- Identify and describe regional trends and variations that characterized the development of the Renaissance and the Reformation, including differences. (LO6)
- Determine the relationship between “high” culture and popular culture during the Renaissance and Reformation periods. (LO7)

Course Delivery Method

This course delivered via distance learning will enable students to complete academic work in a flexible manner, completely online. Course materials (located in Resources) and access to the online learning management system (Sakai) will be made available to each student. Online assignments are due by Friday evening of the week except as otherwise noted and include discussion questions (accomplished in Forums) and individual assignments submitted for review and evaluation by the Faculty Member. Assigned faculty will support the students throughout this course.

Niccolò Machiavelli, The Prince (OL). If you wish to purchase a copy, the Wootton edition (ISBN 9780872203167) is recommended for its excellent translation. The George Bull translation (ISBN 9780143036333), available in the OL, is still used by scholars, and is also recommended for purchase, if you wish. The Marriott translation is available online (see the Course Bibliography).

Giovanni Pico della Mirandola, Oration on the Dignity of Man (Gateway 1956, 1999) or online (see the Course Bibliography). ISBN 0895267136.

HIGHLY RECOMMENDED REFERENCES:

Additional Required Readings: In Resources or provided by the Instructor.

For those students who want a general textbook giving an overview of Renaissance and Reformation history, below are a few suggestions. Important Note: These are undergraduate texts. Do not use them for your essays or forum discussion posts.

IMPORTANT NOTE: The Department of History and Military Studies requires conformity with the traditional University of Chicago Style Manual and its Turabian offshoot. Citations will follow traditional footnote attribution. Do not use endnotes, parenthetical notes, MLA, or APA. Make sure that your Microsoft Word is not set to create an extra line between paragraphs. This is not in accordance with the Chicago Style Manual. Also make sure that Word is set to create one space after punctuation, which Chicago requires. Make sure that you change the preferences in Word before you turn in a written assignment. Historians use the Chicago bibliography style (not the reference style).

Copyright/Fair Use Notice: Electronic readings may be provided by way of licensed materials in the Online Library, but also in keeping with Fair Use exemptions for educational purposes under U.S. Copyright Law.

Websites: In addition to the required course texts Websites are useful. Please abide by the university's academic honesty policy when using Internet sources as well. Note that web site addresses are subject to change.

When submitting work, the proper file name is: Hist535SectionNumberLastNameFirstNameAssignmentName.doc or .docx. No late assignment will receive an A grade unless the instructor has been contacted before the due date with a valid reason.

COMPUTER FAILURE or other technological problems are not an excuse for late work. Save your work every few minutes. Purchase an external hard drive and back up your work. Alternatively, you can save your drafts and documents in a cloud. Google Drive and dropbox.com are free.

FORUM ASSIGNMENTS: Each forum requires answers to questions listed in the forum. Use this opportunity to express critical analysis and deeply engage the course material. Adhere closely to the requirements in the Graduate Forum Grading Rubric found in Resources. Students will respond to all the questions in each forum, and to at least two fellow students. Each post must adhere to Chicago and include footnotes. These forum discussions are preparation for you to participate in professional online discussion forums.

- WEEK 1 of the module: No later than Friday, 11:55 ET, submit the initial posting of no less than 350 words to the required set of questions (all of them) in the forum area for your classmates to read.

- WEEK 2 of the module: By Friday, 11:55 ET, submit at least two responses of at least 250 words each to two different students.

For the forum discussions only, a bibliography is not necessary. Classroom discussion work must be posted to the forum during the module in which it is assigned. Classroom discussions will not be accepted through email or in attachments. Postings unrelated to the module’s discussion, as well as late postings, do not count as participation for grading purposes. There can be no extensions for forum postings because they are the equivalent of attending a face-to-face class. Part of the forum participation will include incorporating what students have learned from the discussions and reviews on the H-Net network they have joined. The first module every student will join an H-Net discussion network. It can take time for an application to be approved, but the logs are public and all students should start reading them as from the first week.

Module 1 is different. You do not have to respond to anyone. You absolutely must post with at least 250 words by Sunday midnight of the first week. This is required, and is graded, to complete your registration as per Department of Education (DOE) regulations. Do not answer in bits and pieces. Write one post.

All essays should be 8-10 double-spaced pages, with standard margins, in Times New Roman 12 pt font. Grading is based on the graduate grading rubric in Resources. You must use a minimum of 10 quality academic sources for each essay that are not required reading (you can reuse sources for other essays). You must actually use these sources in your essay and not just consult them. Remember that the Chicago style and footnotes are always used. All four essays will demonstrate excellent use of journal articles. To understand the quality of work you are expected to achieve in all your written work, it is highly recommended that you read some articles from the recommended journals for the fields of Renaissance and Reformation studies (see the Course Bibliography). Do not forget, in each essay, your title page and bibliography. Note that sources can be shared among the four essays and that you can use essays as a foundation for subsequent ones.

ESSAY BASED ON A BOOK (EBB): Each student is required to write an essay based on any book from the Course Bibliography found in Resources, providing it is not required reading in the course. The essay is not a book review. It includes a brief (and I emphasize brief) summary of the book but is mostly a critical analysis of a theme or idea found in the book. Find a point of interest in the book, and through research, build on it. If the essay is on a book that is literature, a classic academic book (twenty years older or more), or a primary source document, then the essay will solely be a very brief summary, and analysis of why the book or document is important for the study of history and how it connects to course themes. Due Sunday 11:55 PM ET Week 4.

PPT ESSAY: In the first week lesson (see Lessons) is a list of people, places, and “things” (PPT) on which you can write. For this essay, you must use a book from the course bibliography that is not required reading and that you did not read for the EBB. Engage in critical analysis and do not be content with a descriptive essay. What intrigues or confuses you about the person, place, or “thing”? Build on that question. Due Sunday 11:55 PM ET Week 8.

SHORT ESSAYS: Each student is required to write two additional essays. One will be on the Renaissance era (due Sunday 11:55 PM ET Week 12) and the other on the Reformation era (due Sunday 11:55 PM ET Week 16). In these essays, students will argue and support a question of historical significance in the Renaissance and Reformation periods of European history that is related to the course reading.

DIPLOMATIC REPORTS: These are short reports, about two paragraphs, posted by Sunday 11:55 PM ET, the last day of the module. Each of you will choose a city (not Florence) or state that will be yours for the semester. Each module (except the first one) you will write a report on what of significance or interest was going on in your city or state during a quarter-century span. You choose the quarter-century, but it should be connected in some way to the time period being discussed on the forum for that module. These reports are not scholarly works. Write them as if you were a diplomat from Florence who is assigned to another city or state. You are reporting to the Signoria on conditions in foreign lands. Such reports naturally covered political conditions, but they often also contained information on economic trends, peculiar social customs, and court gossip. The intent of these reports is that the whole class will become better informed about various places in Europe. Have some fun with this. This exercise is ungraded, but required. Points are deducted from your forum grade if you do not make the diplomatic report. Do not cite sources for this exercise but, of course, you cannot make things up! Nevertheless, when researching, only use academic-quality resources.

Assignments completed in a narrative essay or composition format must follow the accepted guidelines of the American historical profession, which is the Chicago Manual of Style. This course will require students to use the citation and reference style established by Kate Turabian in A Manual for Writers of Term Papers, Theses, and Dissertations, 7th ed. (Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 2007), which is the most readily available distillation of the Chicago Manual. See, also, the Chicago Style Manual in the Online Library.

The Chicago Manual for book-length works and its Turabian offshoot for research papers has been the standard for historians. These texts cover the layout and production gamut—including rules for chapter headings and subheadings, abbreviations, alphabetizing non-English names, and table design or designation.

1. Front matter—title page, copyright statement, dedication, table of contents, lists of illustrations or tables, acknowledgements, abstract.
2. Narrative with scholarly attributions.

NETIQUETTE

Online universities promote the advance of knowledge through positive and constructive debate—both inside and outside the classroom. Discussions on the Internet, however, can occasionally degenerate into needless insults and “flaming.” Such activity and the loss of good manners are not acceptable in a university setting—basic academic rules of good behavior and proper “Netiquette” must persist. Remember that you are in a place for the fun and excitement of learning that does not include descent to personal attacks, or student attempts to stifle the discussion of others. Humor Note: Despite the best of intentions, jokes and—especially—satire can easily get lost or taken seriously. If you feel the need for humor, you may wish to add “emoticons” to help alert your readers: 😊 Points will be deducted from forum postings that do not adhere to Netiquette or professional standards.

Online Library

The Online Library is available to enrolled students and faculty from inside the electronic campus. This is your starting point for access to online books, subscription periodicals, and Web resources that are designed to support your classes and generally not available through search engines on the open Web. In addition, the Online Library provides access to special learning resources, which the University has contracted to assist with your studies. Questions can be directed to librarian@apus.edu.

- Charles Town Library and Inter Library Loan: The University maintains a special library with a limited number of supporting volumes, collection of our professors’ publication, and services to search and borrow research books and articles from other libraries.
- Electronic Books: You can use the online library to uncover and download over fifty thousand titles, which have been scanned and made available in electronic format.
- Electronic Journals: The University provides access to over twelve thousand journals, which are available in electronic form and only through limited subscription services.
- Tutor.com: For help with writing, go to the Tutorial and Student Study Center Portal in the Online Library. If you have questions, you may email librarian@apus.edu. They are available seven days a week. Active duty military have a different area to use in Tutor.com.
