The global reach of the Internet, the low cost of online activity, and the relative anonymity of users has led to an increase in computer related crimes. This course focuses on cybercrime investigation and prevention; it appraises the legal issues related to on-line criminal conduct, the collection of electronic evidence, and the onslaught of new technology. This course also analyzes the phases, processes, and challenges of cybercrime investigations, and it examines technical, legal, and social issues relating to the search and seizure of digital evidence and computer forensics. Students will encounter the challenges of the latency between technology and the law.
STUDENT WARNING: This course syllabus is from a previous semester archive and serves only as a preparatory reference. Course Scope

This course is designed to enable students to concentrate on the legal issues and challenges that the changes in technology have created. Crimes such as identity theft, fraud, software protection, cyberterrorism, property rights violations and online stalking will be explored. This course will examine how laws have expanded and changed to account for the increase of crimes in the digital age. Primarily because of, but not entirely due to the Internet, crimes such as identity theft have become more common than in past. This course will examine computer laws such as the Computer Fraud and Abuse Act, Electronics Communications Privacy Act, Communication Decency Act, and the Digital Millennium Act. We will examine the techniques and guidelines for observing, collecting, documenting and storing of electronic evidence, as well as, preparing for depositions and trials. These issues, and more, will be addressed by an examination of the current literature on these topics.

Course Objectives

A successful student will fulfill the following learning objectives:

1. The course will familiarize students with the dimensions of criminal activity and the use of surveillance in the world of cyber security. The methods used to commit cybercrimes and the techniques utilized to detect such crimes.
2. Students will be given a broad overview of relevant topics to include online crimes such as identity theft, online child victimization, cyber attacks, and cyberstalking.
3. Examine technology relevant to electronic evidence. Students will learn how to categorize and analyze types of computer crimes, such as when a computer is a target, when the computer is used as a weapon and using the computer as an accessory.
4. Understanding the social and economic impacts of cybercrime. Students will examine the role of economics as it relates to crime and its impact on the criminal justice system.
5. This course will provide students with the understanding of the laws and legal issues as they relate to cybercrime. Students will be presented with new and challenging problems pertaining to cyberlaw.
6. This course will present students with the appropriate actions and protocol involved in the thorough collection, preservation, and presentation of evidentiary material.
7. Knowledge of how to investigate and prosecute a cybercrime case, as well as, the principles of criminal evidence. Students will learn the analysis of the rules of evidence such as chain of custody, preservation of evidence, and procedural requirements.
8. Gain an understanding of organized crime and international crime on the Internet. Differentiate between various types of computer crime and determine if a crime has been committed, according to the facts of the case.

Course Delivery Method

This course delivered via distance learning will enable students to complete academic work in a flexible manner, completely online. Course materials and access to an online learning management system will be made available to each student. Online assignments are due by the last day of each week and include Forum questions (accomplished in groups through a threaded Forum), examinations and quizzes (graded electronically), and individual assignments (submitted for review by the Faculty Member). Assigned faculty will support the students throughout this eight-week course.

Submit assignments to your student folder, and make sure you select the correct assignment association. Please name your submitted document with your last name as the first part of the file name. For example, Assignment #1 could be named, Lastname_Assignment1.doc. Forum assignments only need to be posted on the Forum. It is not necessary to submit a word document containing your Forum posts. Simply submit your discussion posts using the submit button and I will review them and update your assignment grade accordingly.
Assignment Requirements

This course has a strong writing component. The goal is to organize, synthesize, and demonstrate your comprehension of core concepts investigated during this course by applying a combination of the terms, concepts, and details you have learned in a systematic way. As important as "the details" that you analyze and arrange in your writing, however, are the conclusions you draw from those details, and your predictions, responses to, and ultimate interpretation of those details.

Assignments are due by Sunday 11:59 p.m. ET of the week in which they are assigned. If you need an extension, please contact me via email to discuss your circumstances. Assignments submitted late without prearranged extension will be subject to a 10% per day late penalty. For example, if you post a late assignment 1 day after the due you will receive a 10% penalty. If the assignment is submitted two weeks after the due date you will receive an additional 10% resulting in a 20% deduction in the grade. Please pay attention to the assignment due dates to avoid having points deducted from your grade. No late assignments will be accepted after the last day of the course.

FORUM ACTIVITIES:

Each Forum activity will consist of one or more threads/topics. The assignments may involve discussion or debate. The questions are designed to allow you to apply what you have learned in the chapters to real-world scenarios or hypothetical, but realistic, situations. Post your answers to the questions in each thread prior to 11:59 p.m. ET on Sunday at 11:59 pm. It is strongly advised that you do not wait until Sunday to post your answers. You are required to respond to at least two of your classmates post by 11:59. By waiting until Sunday to post might not give you proper time to respond by the deadline. Please do not be late with this post because your classmates will be relying on you to post on time. Please do not be late with this post because your classmates will be relying on you to post on time to give them a post to respond to later in the week. A discussion period will then ensue from Thursday through Sunday. Read your classmates’ posts and post at least two follow-up messages to your classmates’ posts in each thread prior to 11:59 p.m. ET on Sunday. Some threads may require you to post more than two replies, so make sure you read the directions carefully. Of course, you may always post more than the required number of replies and you are encouraged to continue participating in the discussion even after you have met the minimum number of posts required. Your Forum participation will be considered at the end of the semester if your grade is on the borderline. Borderline grades will only be rounded up if you have exceeded the minimum requirements on the Forum and shown insight and critical thinking in all of your posts and replies. Your follow-up posts must contain substance and should add additional insight to your classmates’ opinions or challenge their opinions. It is never sufficient to simply say, "I agree with what you wrote" or "I really liked your post." You must use your follow-up posts as a way to continue the discussion at a high level of discourse. Be sure to read the follow-up posts to your own posts and reply to any questions or requests for clarification, including questions posted by your professor. You will be expected to log into the classroom several times each week to participate in the class discussion. Forum postings are a large part of your grade and I will be looking for quality and depth in your postings. I will also expect you to list your references at the end of each post. References should be in APA citation format.
